Starting on November 17, Fountain Street Gallery in Framingham opens a new exhibit: "In Place," featuring the work of two Boston-area artists, Cory Munro Shea and Mia Cross. The show, which displays a variety of each artist's work, including mixed media, installation, painting, and sculpture, centers on the notion of "home." Shea and Cross's work carry similar themes of femininity, beauty, and nostalgia, while walking the line between feelings of innocence and a more ominous narrative.

Cory Munro Shea is a working artist and arts administrator residing in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Her artwork has appeared in several galleries in the New England area. Shea's work explores the idea of expectation crashing into reality, most often through mix-media photography. In this particular exhibition, Shea also branches into 3D installation work.

Mia Cross is a Framingham native who graduated from Boston University in 2014 with a double major in painting and sculpture. Since graduating Cross has shown in many Boston-area spaces, including the Danforth Museum of Art, the Attleboro Arts Museum, and several galleries in Boston's South End. Cross explores the figure through oil painting and life-size sculpture. She currently works out of her studio in Framingham.

"In Place" will run from November 17th through December 18th. The gallery is located at 59 Fountain Street, Framingham, MA and is open Thursday through Sunday from 11am to 5pm, or by appointment. To see more of the artists' work or to inquire about a piece, visit their websites: www.corymshea.com & www.miacross.com.

Fountain Street Fine Art, a resource for artists, art-lovers and collectors, is a contemporary gallery in Framingham, MA, that exhibits the artwork of twenty emerging and mid-career painters, sculptors and photographers.
